Serving the Businesses and Citizens of Jefferson County

Six Honored with Community Leadership Awards

The 2018 Jefferson County Community Leadership Award honorees were (left to right) Chimacum High School senior and Future Business Leader Award recipient Renee Woods, Business Leader of the Year Hans Frederickson, Citizen of the Year Myron Vogt, Young Professional of the Year Tyler Meeks, and Rising Entrepreneur Award co-winner Deborah Taylor (co-winner Scott Ross not pictured). Six community and business leaders were recently honored with Jefferson County Community Leadership Awards at the annual celebratory brunch held at the Old Alcohol Plant in Port Hadlock.

Hans Frederickson, owner of Frederickson Electric, was named 2018 Business Leader of the Year. His father, Erik Frederickson, who was honored as Citizen of the Year in 2003, was also in attendance at the event.

The 2018 Citizen of the Year Award went to Myron Vogt, a longtime volunteer with the Boeing Bluebills. Vogt has led the nonprofit organization's Olympic Peninsula

Chapter, comprised of Boeing retirees who volunteer their skills, knowledge and time in completing service projects within the community, for more than 20 years.

I want to thank all who volunteered their time and resources to making the annual Jefferson County Community Leadership Awards a success. While our cover story provides a recap of the April 7 event at the Old Alcohol Plant, the real story is the months of planning meetings, sponsorship applications, graphic production, and more and more meetings, and the many people committed to creating this celebratory occasion and the well-received Nominee/Sponsor Meet-Up held at Port Townsend Vineyards a week prior to the main event.

Thank you sponsors – one and all – for making this celebration of our community superstars practicable, and the Old Alcohol Plant and their staff for assisting in coordination and helping each attendee at our sold-out main event feel special. Our Planning Committee also deserves a huge round of applause and a sincere thank you for dedicating months of their time and effort to this project – Karen Best, Heidi Haney, Aislinn Palmer, Bethany Smith, Lizanne Coker, Carlie Robertson, Reneé Mizar and Pam Lampman.

Thank you all!

Washington State Representative, the Honorable Mike Chapman, struck the perfect note of humor and inspiration as our keynote speaker. Our past awardees were fabulous presenters to this year's honorees and the feedback from them is inspirational. I speak for all of us who participated this year in saying "Job Well Done" to the community for their nominations and selections!

morphed and grown during that time until now, when that project is coming to fruition.

The park will create a gorgeous entrance to our community, inviting all those who enter to rest a moment, experience the displayed sculpture, and maybe step into the Visitor information Center to plan their adventures with our intrepid volunteer team. Our Readerboard, a longstanding beacon for your announcements and messages, will remain prominently displayed and no doubt even more highly visible to guests and residents alike!

In early May, the U.S. Navy and the Port of Port Townsend will be loaning their community-minded teams to the Chamber to assist in carefully disassembling the blue building, repurposing as much material as possible to provide a clean slate for the City to begin park construction early Summer 2019.

"Old Blue," the former home of our Visitor Information

Center, was offered free to a good home for a long time by the Chamber, however, all those interested in adaptive reuse rapidly discovered that it was a very expensive process – too expensive to reasonably consider. We are delighted that our community partners have stepped up to assist the Chamber in preparing the site for the City's project and can't wait to welcome you all to experience this new Gateway to Port Townsend! Learn more about the plan and process from City Manager David Timmons at our Chamber Luncheon on Monday, May 20 at the Commons at Fort Worden.

Prepare to bid a fond farewell to "Old Blue," the former Port Townsend Visitor Information Center building. Courtesy of the Jefferson County Chamber.

Advance Luncheon Registration

Luncheon pre-registration at both of our venues – the Commons at Fort Worden and the Elks Lodge in Port Townsend – is now expected out of fairness and good business practice to our hosts and catering teams. We have made registration a simple online process for Chamber members and guests through the Chamber's website (www.jeffcountychamber.org). Members logging in with their credentials will receive a discount on the cost of lunch. If you cannot recall or need new credentials, please let us know and we will immediately send an invitation to join or to update. There are some exciting upcoming topics and presenters and we don't want you to miss them!

Proud Platinum Sponsor of the Jefferson County Community Leadership Awards

Power Trip Energy Corp

Power Trip Energy Corp designs and installs solar energy systems on the Olympic Peninsula that can accomplish numerous goals for our clients. We are proud to be celebrating our 16th year of business in 2019 and installation of over 4 MW of grid-tied PV on about 800 homes and small businesses on the Olympic Peninsula. We primarily aim to achieve a favorable economic return, recognizing that economics is a crucial and sometimes overlooked aspect of "sustainability." Our company looks at each project through the lens of how it serves our clients and employees, as well as the owners, benefits to each of these groups are equally important.

We also consider the environmental footprint of the installation in the short and long term, as our company's mission of stewardship requires us to consider the full life cycle cost both in terms of dollars, carbon, and other resources.

We consistently review the state of renewable energy technology and industry available to us and our clients, and for the last 16 years, have found that grid-tied solar PV is the most advantageous way to make your own energy. The systems provide an economic return, and are extremely reliable and consistent in their energy production. Compared to hydro-carbon-derived energy, the environmental benefits are tremendous, and socially, the benefits of individual power production are emancipating. Developing localized power sources is important to the long-term health of the local economy.

While installing solar PV systems is our business, spreading the word about clean, locally produced solar electricity is our mission. We enjoy providing free "Spin Your Meter Backwards" educational solar workshops for homeowners, and a variety of other events including classroom visits from elementary through community college level, panel discussions, and lobbying opportunities throughout the communities of Western Washington.

We are 11 employees strong, experienced in all types of solar PV installations including roof-mounted, ground-mounted and pole-mounted tracking systems for residential, commercial, non-profit and government projects. We are averaging two PV system installations every week without sub-contracting any of our work and all under the direct supervision of the company's owners.

Tyler Meeks, proprietor of the Disco Bay Outdoor Exchange, was named the 2018 Young Professional of the Year. Recognized as a community-focused entrepreneur who fosters community relationships and collaboration, his Discovery Bay-based business provides affordable, high-quality outdoor adventure gear.

Chimacum High School senior Renee Woods received the new Future Business Leader Award. Being chief editor of her school's newspaper, captain of the tennis and volleyball teams, and serving as Senior Class Co-President are just a few of her accomplishments in an impressive and growing academic resume!

The Rising Entrepreneur

Award went to Port Townsend restaurateurs Deborah Taylor and Scott Ross. As co-owners of destination restaurant Finistère, Taylor and Ross were recognized in this new award category for demonstrating a commitment toward economic development and business innovation, including their effective use of social media marketing, creating an inviting website, and investing in cutting-edge reservation software.

The Chamber of Jefferson County and its Board of Directors wishes to congratulate the award recipients and nominees for their outstanding efforts in making Jefferson County a vibrant business community. Sincere appreciation also goes to State Rep. the Honorable Mike Chapman for giving an inspiring keynote address, all the award presenters, Ambassadors, volunteers, and Nominating Committee and Planning Committee for helping create a memorable event, the many sponsors whose backing made it possible, and honored guests and all who attended to show their support for the nominees, Chamber, and our community. Thank you!

"I moved up to Port Townsend from Los Gatos, California, in 1989. My next-door neighbors had moved here, and my husband and I visited and fell in love with it. After he passed away, they encouraged me to come here.

I'm an LPN and worked for Family Physicians here in Port Townsend for about 10 years, then opened an adult family home that I ran for many years. I finally decided I needed to retire and sold the business, but I have one client left here in town. I take him to the doctor and store and am on the other side of the phone when he needs me.

I love Port Townsend because it's a small town, there's lots to do, it has everything you need, and everybody is very friendly here. I love Centrum and all their programs, and I try to see a few of those in the summer.

I volunteered at the Visitor Information Center, in the old blue building, for a couple of years in the early 1990s. I'm back volunteering because I just love talking to people and knew Debbie (Reid, Volunteer Coordinator). I get a big kick out of how many locals come in asking questions because they've got family coming from out of town and want to know what they should see and do with them. That's kind of fun."

Lean Thinking is Improving Life in Jefferson County

by Jay Bakst, Community Lean Resource

Several organizations in Jefferson County have combined to improve our life by building a Lean infrastructure. Is it working? And what are the next steps?

Over the past six years, EDC Team Jefferson, the Jefferson County Chamber of Commerce, and Jefferson County Foundation have provided the wherewithal to introduce Lean Thinking to 80 organizations and over 700 individuals through a combination of workshops, classes, and on-site presentations.

Perhaps the easiest to understand is the impact on our local businesses. Organizations such as Mt. Townsend Creamery, the Food Co-op and others have seen profits and sales increase from 30-100% while being constrained to their existing footprint and workforce. Mt. Townsend Creamery has used Lean Thinking to get a better handle on inventory, while reducing last-minute scrambling for parts and materials. The Food Co-op has engaged everyone to identify and reduce wasted effort as well as improve inventory control.

Another business, Finnriver Cidery, uses Lean Thinking to operate more effectively and increase efficiency in production – both in rethinking old systems as well as in implementing new systems and equipment. They have created an environment where employees can focus on improvement in a positive and constructive way.

Agencies such as our public libraries and the Northwest Maritime Center's Chandlery can demonstrate how Lean Thinking can improve life for many in Jefferson County. At the Jefferson County Library, the process for getting new materials onto the shelf once it's received by the library, has decreased from 2-3 weeks down to 2-3 days. Similarly, many types of repairs have seen a similar decrease in time to get damaged material back into circulation.

At the Port Townsend Public Library, a process of color-coding shelving carts also gets materials back on the shelves sooner. These improvements have also reduced stress and effort on the part of library staff. The staff of the Chandlery applied Lean Thinking to their stockroom. The changes that they made and are sustaining have reduced the time customers need to wait for items, reduced staff frustration, and initiated a stronger continuous improvement methodology.

And this is the tip of the iceberg regarding the impact that Lean Thinking has had in Jefferson County. Organizations as diverse as manufacturing, agriculture, retail, healthcare, education, construction, non-profit, government, and technology have been part of our county's Lean journey and continue to move forward. We are building improved training for individuals and smaller companies and continue to add sectors to our Lean community.

If you have an interest in learning more, contact lean@edcteamjefferson.org.

Jay Bakst, of Raviyah Training and Consulting, serves as Jefferson County's Community Lean Resource. He provides training and one-hour consultations to organizations in Jefferson County through EDC Team Jefferson.

What is Lean Thinking?

Lean Thinking is an improvement methodology focusing on providing customer value and increasing process flow.

RISING ENTREPRENEUR

Our local companies never cease to amaze us with their innovation and the broad reach of their products and services – regionally, nationally and internationally. Each month, we will highlight a local business that is an innovative and rising sector leader whose entrepreneurship is expanding and adding to the local economy and strengthening our workforce.

GBF Catering (“God Bless Food”)

Thysen Scott’s passion is food. Although his career started in flooring at the age of 15, learning how to sell and install flooring through his mother’s carpet store, his love has always been cooking food. As the second oldest of eight kids, he learned to cook at the age of 8, often preparing the meals for the family. This wasn’t his only exposure to cooking food.

Thysen, who with business partner and wife Debi are proprietors of Port Ludlow-based GBF Catering, comes from a family of restaurateurs. His mother’s side owns the Taco Time franchise. His father owns seven restaurants in the Seattle area (where Thysen cooked and managed for two years in his mid-20s), and his aunt owns one of the largest catering companies in the Seattle area (where he cooked for Microsoft and other groups of up to 1,200 people).

From Flooring to Food

Thysen’s flooring business brought him to Jefferson County in 2007, so he could be closer to his full-time contract installing for Westport Yachts in Port Angeles, Westport and Hoquiam. Then in 2009, Thysen met his soon-to-be bride Debi and they married in 2010.

For anyone who knows Thysen well, they know he cooks for everyone he can, as often as possible, delivering food to friends, customers, and those he feels “need a good meal, free of charge.”

Although the exposure to food has always been there, and his love for cooking has always been his passion, it wasn’t until the fall of 2013 when he was encouraged to start catering after doing a flooring job for the Port Townsend Paper Corporation through his primary business, “The Carpet Specialist.” After bringing in his specialty food to Rita Hubbard and the staff, they asked Thysen if he would cater their Christmas party. That’s where it all “officially” started.

In December 2013, Thysen and Debi started their company, GBF Catering, which stands for “God Bless Food”... and Thysen explains, as he points up with his finger, “all the Glory goes to Him.”

One Great Meal at a Time

GBF caters for events of all sizes and types, including corporate events, non-profit, birthdays and anniversaries, celebrations of life, etc. They pride themselves on serving hot food hot, cold food cold, and making everything taste great.

Thysen jokes, “I want to feed the world, one great meal at a time,” and he offers American favorites that are taken up a few notches to bring out the best in everything he serves. Catering is the first step in food for Thysen, and there are always plans in motion for the future...which definitely revolves around food.

While Thysen and Debi run the catering business, they also have a solid core of staff to help with service at larger events. Susan Lind, a family member, has been helping since the very first event. “We are blessed to have such a great team of people willing to jump in and help sporadically when needed,” said Thysen.

Community Catering

GBF Catering has also become a food favorite at several community events, including Port Ludlow Movie Night. Their next event that is open to the public will be the Hadlock Building Supply Customer Appreciation Lunch on May 4, where they will provide a Free All You Can Eat Taco Bar from 11 a.m.-2 p.m.

In addition to collecting glowing testimonials from satisfied clients, this growing company has also been collecting community accolades. Thysen and Debi were recently nominated for a Jefferson County Community Leadership Award in the Young Professionals category, and Thysen has won the Best Chef category in The Port Townsend Leader Reader Poll for two out of the last three years (coming in 2nd place last year), as well as Best Flooring. It appears that he has found his home.

Student "Art Wave" Rolls into PT

Merchants in Port Townsend's historic districts are displaying student artwork in their storefronts throughout the month of May as part of the annual "Art Wave!" exhibit.

The artwork, created by Port Townsend School District students in grades K-12, is an annual exhibition celebrating children's creative expression through art and is a collaboration with participating uptown and downtown Port Townsend businesses. Funds raised will help support diverse offerings by PT Artscape, including the Teaching Artists Programs at Salish Coast Elementary School, Blue Heron Middle School, and Port Townsend High School, as well as professional development for teaching artists and classroom teachers.
